AUTOMOBILE IS RETURNED TO DOCTOR

Yesterday Dr. J. W. Piddock's automobile, which was stolen from 22nd street Wednesday evening, was found at the Fair Grounds where it had been left by the thief. The officers, after waiting a number of hours for the culprit to return to the machine at the shed near the race track last night, returned the auto to the doctor. Parties working at the Fair Grounds training trotting horses, say that the machine was left at the grounds some time during Thursday night, as it was not there at any time during Thursday, but was discovered in the shed Friday morning. An investigation disclosed the fact that the machine had been well cared for, while in the hands of the thief, as the tank was full of water and no damage was done. An excess of mud on the running gear proved that the auto had traveled some since it was taken and the lamps gave evidence of having been used the two nights the machine was out of the doctor's hands. Sheriff Devine hoped to capture the thief last night. The machine was left in the shed and officers were stationed there to arrest whoever came after it. No one appeared and early this morning the auto was turned over to the doctor. It is the opinion of the officers that it was not a joy rider, as one of that stripe would not take a chance on using it two nights. The one who took the machine evidently came to the conclusion that he could not dispose of it without being discovered, so he drove it to the place where it was found.

LITTLE GIRLS MAKE GRAVE MISTAKE

After being identified by six little girls as the negro who unlawfully exposed himself to them, the complaint against Fred D. Murray, a negro, arrested yesterday on complaint of John Williams was dismissed, when W. C. Francis of the commissary department of the Union Pacific, showed by his record that Murray had left Ogden on a dining car previous to the time the offense was alleged to have occurred. The court room was cleared before testimony was taken in the case. All the witnesses were under 10 years of age, but they declared that the negro was the fellow who whistled to them from the tracks near their home on Monday evening, at dusk. When Murray took the stand he asked that Mr. Francis be communicated with as that gentleman would know that he had left Ogden on a dining car at 1:20 o'clock that afternoon. In response to a telephone message, Mr. Francis came to the court with his records and verified the statement of Murray. The waiter had arrived from the east at 6:40 o'clock in the morning and had been busy at the commissary department until the time the train left. When that evidence was heard, City Attorney John Heywood dismissed the action. As an explanation for the identification of him by the children, Murray stated that, during his stops in Ogden, it had been his custom to walk from one end of the yards to the other for exercise and that he had been following that practice for three years instead of going up town. The children had observed him during these walks.

John Williams had the man arrested when some person notified him that Murray was the man who had committed the offense.

Harry Green and Matt Conroy, with similar complaints against them, were arraigned before Judge Reeder this morning and both entered pleas of not guilty.

Green asked until Tuesday to secure a lawyer, and his bond was fixed at $100.

Conroy was ready for trial but Judge Reeder asked that another judge be secured to try the case as he was acquainted with the facts of the case, gleaned from without the court.

TWO OF GANG ARRESTED BY OFFICERS

With the arrest of T. G. Conley and George Mattern, the police believe they have two of a gang that has been robbing intoxicated persons during the last few days, but no such serious charges were placed against them.

Conley was charged with drunkenness, and Mattern with disturbing the peace. The two were arrested by Detective Charles Pincock and Patrolman James Bachman after the two and another had been pointed out as the fellows who had taken a purse from a drunk. The third man escaped in the shuffle.

Stating that he did not know what he did because of his drinking, Mattern pleaded not guilty to the charge of disturbing the peace. Both the arresting officers stated that when arrested he had cursed them loudly and refused to go without a warrant.

He declared that he was a "stool pigeon" and was not connected with the gang. Judge Reeder found him guilty and gave him 45 days. Conley admitted that he was drunk but denied all knowledge about a purse. His case was continued until Monday morning.

WORLD'S MARKETS*WALL STREET

New York, May 17.—Few orders were on hand when the stock market opened today and trading was exceptionally dull. Prices of the active stocks in most cases showed slight recessions from yesterday's close. There was renewed pressure against some of the lower priced railway shares. St. Louis and San Francisco second preferred receded to 18, a new low record. Rock Island preferred lost 1-1-4.

Selling of the dividend-paying shares stopped when the realising sales had been disposed of. With this weight off the market, prices rallied half a point or more, although the Rock Island and St. Louis and San Francisco issues continued to go down.

The market closed heavy. Trading operations were confined within a narrow range, and movements of the active issues were without feature during the half day session. The general market was not affected by a further break in the Rock Island and St. Louis and San Francisco securities, for which no authoritative explanation was offered.

Some heaviness was shown at the outset, with special pressure against Canadian Pacific, but this tendency soon wore off and the list moved up to above yesterday's close. Top figures, however, were not maintained, some selling orders making their appearance again as the session drew to a close.

Bonds were steady.

WM. NAZIMOVA, IN "BELLA DONNA," AT THE ORPHEUM, MONDAY NIGHT

The popularity of Robert Hichens as a novelist needs no greater proof than the fact that already two of his novels have been dramatized. The second of the novels of that widely read author, to be made into a play, is "Bella Donna," and with Madame Nazimova in the name part it has proved to be the big dramatic sensation of the year. "Bella Donna" was originally produced in London a year ago with Mrs. Pat Campbell in the title role, but those who have seen both performances appear to be of the opinion that in the hands of Madame Nazimova the character of Bella Donna is the most trying role that this distinguished Russian actress has played since she

MRS. BROWN IS POISONED AND DIES

Mrs. Celestia Jane Brown, widow of the late Nephil Brown of 151 Thirtieth-second street, died last evening at her home of ptomaine poisoning from eating meat purchased at a local butcher shop Monday.

All the children, except one, who did not eat of the meat were poisoned but their illness was of little consequence as they were soon relieved by emetics. Mrs. Brown, however, was so badly poisoned that the skill of a physician could not save her life.

Immediately after eating the meat, the members of the family who partook of it became suddenly ill with crampings of the stomach and vomiting and Mrs. Brown grew worse until the end came at 7 o'clock last evening.

Mrs. Brown was born in Ogden August 7, 1862. She is survived by her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Cornelius Stevens, two brothers and three sisters, all of Ogden, and the following children: Mrs. Lettie P. Penrod, John A. Brown, Lewis Brown, James Brown, Francis Brown, Miss Leona Brown and Miss Mollie Brown.

L. R. Eccles, of the Amalgamated Sugar company, returned from La Grande, Ore., this morning.

Mr. Eccles had a number of outstanding accounts that needed attention at La Grande. When the factory was removed to the Burley district the company had quite a large acreage of land on hand that has been turned into use for farming other than sugar beet raising. The lands are planted to grain this year, but are to be disposed of as rapidly as possible, as the company does not desire to get into the farming business.

Speaking of the possibility of beginning building operations of the new Eccles skyscraper in the near future, Mr. Eccles says he can see no reason why work should not be started at once, even though the supreme court decision be withheld for some time. He says, however, that he has no direct control and that nothing definite can be done until his brother, David C. Eccles, returns from the east next week.

Start out with the intention of calling everything by its right name and you will change your mind before you have gone a block.

The Devil's Admiral

Illustration from "The Devil's Admiral"

DO you think that just because you don't hear of ships under the Jolly Roger sweeping the Spanish Main, or becalmed and jeweled gentlemen boarding innocent traders and making their crews walk the plank today, that there are no pirates? Far from it. Here is the story of a modern pirate who had the methods of the old fellows lashed to the mast. For he never left a soul alive to even tell whether he was white man or black man or fiend. Young Trenholm shipped on the Kut Sang from Manila to Hong Kong, but afterward wished he hadn't even thought he did find the Devil's Admiral.

Some Press Quotings:

"A novel of rushing adventure, with sea and island and pirate, and the 'punch' of exciting action. It is a genuine pirate story."

"This is one of the best sea stories that has been written for years, and it may be commended to any one who wishes a tale of stirring action and fierce excitement."

"A thrilling and interesting pirate story which is a distinct addition to that particular kind of fiction. The tale is well told and it has the power to hold one. It is well worth reading."

Adventure from Actual Experience

FREDERICK FERDINAND MOORE JAMES FRANCIS DWYER
Author of "The Devil's Admiral" Author of "The White Waterfall"

TWO more confirmed world wanderers than these author-friends would be hard to find. Both have had picturesque careers full of experiences in out-of-the-way places that would satisfy the most inordinate appetite for adventure. Mr. Moore, as sailor, has encircled the globe, stopping off en route where, as he puts it, "things looked interesting." As war correspondent he went through the Russo-Japanese war, he was in San Francisco for the earthquake, and has served as cavalryman and soldier when times seemed dull. Mr. Dwyer, too, has "seen life," for by his own confession, he has held no less than thirty-five jobs in different parts of the world, ranging from theatrical super to war correspondent. When these two tell stories of adventure they are right in their element—they need only look into their own experience for plots as thrilling as "Treasure Island" or "Allan Quatermain."

The White Waterfall

Illustration from "The White Waterfall"

Sixty paces to the left. That's the way to heaven out of Black Fernando's hell.

—and it was a hell—that vermillion pit into which Black Fernando lured the party from the good ship Wail. Surrounded by smooth cliffs of basalt, with a crater below and the black Wizards of the Centipede ready to sacrifice them above, there seemed no escape. That rhyme heard by one of the party from the lips of a Maori long before saved them. It's a weird tale; one that will make your blood run cold.

Some Press Quotings:

"If you want to get the same sort of cramps in your nerves that you enjoyed when you read of the weird happenings in the land of 'She,' or followed the adventures of Allan Quatermain, take that opening sista with Jack Versluis, who tells the story, on the wharf at Leruka."

—New York Times
"No reader is likely to drop the book till he has witnessed the miracle of escape for Leith's intended victim."

—New York World
"We leave the reader to find out for himself what happens in the vicinity of the white waterfall. It is all too surprising and exciting for us to diminish his curiosity by a half's breadth. This is a good yarn, one of the lightest and most entertaining printed this year."
